REMEDIAL TEACHING

Remedial education, also known as basic skills development, is instruction provided to students who need more support in core areas such as reading and math. These students qualify for remediation because of their poor performance in those areas. This instruction can be provided in different ways.

The ultimate goal of remedial education is to assist students who have fallen behind in their studies in learning to the best of their abilities and to return them to mainstream classrooms as soon as feasible

Who needs remedial teaching?

Students who have consistently performed poorly in at least one core academic content area, like reading or math, should be considered for remedial teaching in order to help them be successful with their grade level coursework.

What are the remedial teaching strategies?

Remedial education may be provided in a variety of models, with the most common being referred to as push-in or pull-out services. This is where a remediation teacher will either be in the general education classroom to provide foundational support to individuals or small groups, or will pull those students or small groups to another setting to provide that support.

Remedial education strategies might include:

Executive functioning skills

Math facts practice

Reading fluency practice

Phonics Instruction

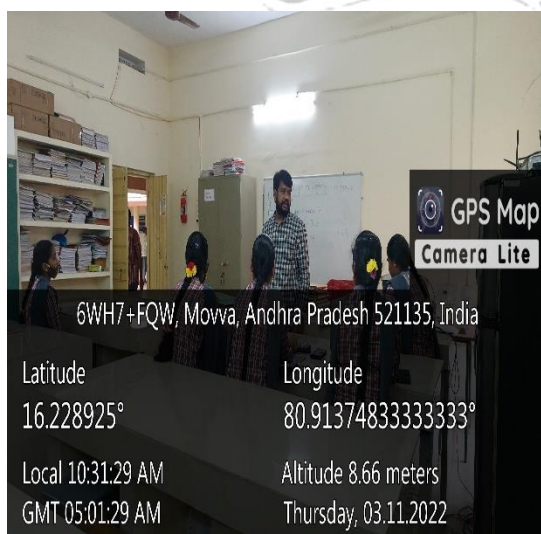

What is the role of a remedial teacher?

The role of the remedial teacher is to identify potential learning gaps that are hindering the student's progress in the general education classroom. Then, that teacher should provide materials, given consistent feedback, and monitor progress of that student.

How is remedial education connected to special education?

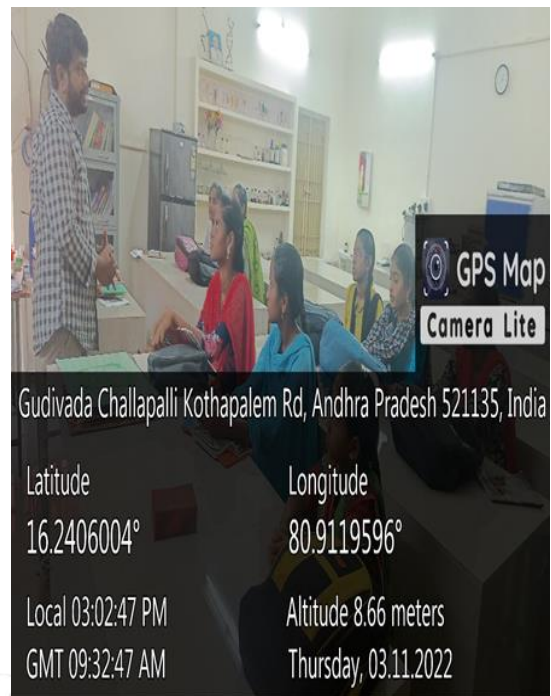

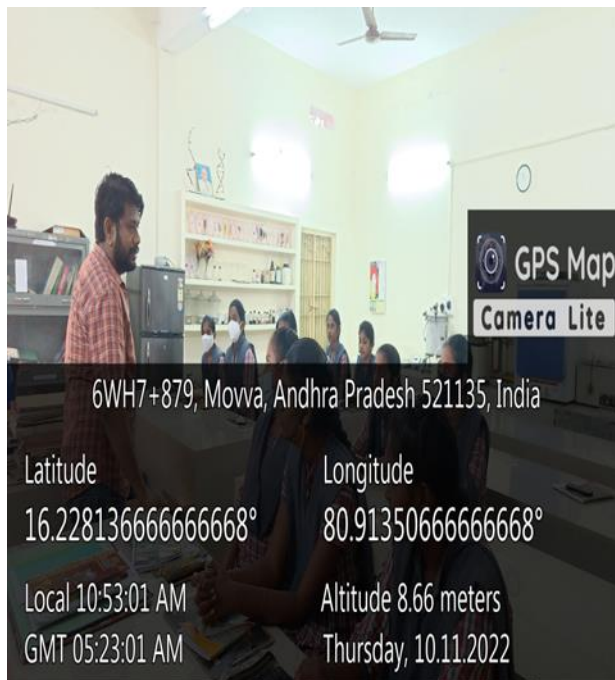

Remedial education is often the first step in addressing a student who is struggling in a core content area. If the strategies from remedial education do not help close learning gaps, that student may be recommended for evaluation to determine eligibility for special education services. Students might also receive remedial coursework within their special education services plan.
